QS has always been a very professional and experienced team in handling the higher education summits, they have a very vast network of higher education institutions around the world.

Prof Dato' Dr Roslee Bin Rajikan, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia

Overview

The QS Higher Ed Summit: Asia Pacific 2023 focused on the theme of “Creating the right outcomes: universities and the future of work in the Asia Pacific.”

Some key highlights from the summit are as follows:

Day 1:

- A panel discussion on “Higher education in APAC: Defining and measuring success” highlighted the importance of understanding the context of an institution, its community, and its country when measuring success in education.
- The keynote speech by Prof. Aaron Voon-Yew Thean from the National University of Singapore emphasized leveraging diversity for multidisciplinary education and research to address modern societal and industrial problems.
- Novie Tajuddin discussed the intersection of digitalization in education, innovative micro-credential programs, and the demand for professional certifications.

Day 2:

- In the panel “Student Voices: SDG Literacy for Impactful Careers,” the importance of bridging the gap between the skills universities provide and what employers and students expect in light of climate and social emergencies was discussed.
- The panel discussion on “Turning Data into Dialogue: The Future of Inclusive Higher Education & Academic Research” explored the transformative potential of data-driven strategies and its value in benchmarking best practices and fostering an all-inclusive research culture strategy.

Day 3:

- A panel titled “Me, myself & AI: Impact of the 4th industrial revolution” discussed the impact of artificial intelligence (AI) on classrooms and work in the future.
- Harsha Ravindran highlighted the importance of high-performing work-ready skills and personalized learning journeys for equipping future leaders.

Overall, the summit provided insights into measuring success in education, leveraging diversity for multidisciplinary education and research, addressing climate and social emergencies, the value of data-driven strategies, and the impact of AI on the future of work and education.

I would recommend QS Conferences services to other institutions, simply because it is definitely a very good, very healthy platform for institutions to get to know one another and to understand what is going on.
